Get your tickets for the Wallabies-Fiji clash

Minister for Tourism, Sport and Recreation, Andrew Barr, today urged Canberrans to get their tickets for the Qantas Wallabies versus Fiji Test Match at Canberra Stadium this Saturday night.

The game kicks off at 7.30 pm.

“We still have tickets for the match but we expect them to go between now and Saturday so I urge Canberrans to get their tickets now and to show their support for world-class rugby in the Nation’s Capital,” Mr Barr said.

“Not only will a big Canberra crowd help the Wallabies to victory, it will also help ensure we continue to host international test matches in Canberra.

“Last year’s international against Italy proved to be a huge success, attracting over 22,000 spectators. We’re hoping for a big crowd this Saturday.

“It’s a fantastic opportunity for locals to come out and see the Australian team in action. Fiji was a quarter-finalist at the last Rugby Union World Cup and are renowned for playing an exciting brand of rugby. This match is sure to be a great spectacle.”

Mr Barr encouraged Canberrans to invite their friends and family from interstate to join them at the match.

“This Test Match is just another great reason to invite friends and family to Canberra for the weekend to show them that there’s so much to do here, from sport, to great restaurants and bars to the national attractions,” Mr Barr said.
